

Josh Billing's sayings.

There seems to be four styles of mind:
1st them who knows its so!
2d them who knows it aint so!
3d them who split the difference and guess at it!
4th them who don't care a darn which way it is!

There is but few men who hex character enuff to lead a life of idleness.
True love is spelt just the same way in Choctaw as it is in English.

Those who retire from the world on account of its sins and peckiness must not forget that they have yet to keep company with a person who wants just as much watchin as any body else.

A puppy plays with every pup he meets but old dogs have few associates.
It costs a great deal to be wise, but it don't cost anything to be happy.

Necessity begot convenience, convenience begot pleasure, pleasure begot luxury, luxury begot riot and disease, riot and disease, between them, begot poverty; poverty begot necessity again—and this is the revolution of man and is about all he can brag on.

"Love lies bleeding!"—This is probably one of the darndest lies ever was told.

When a man loses his health, then he just begins to take care on it. This is good judgement, this is!

An individual to be a fine gentleman, has either got to be born so, or be brought up so from infancy; he can't learn it sudden any more than he can learn to talk Injun correctly by practisen on a tomahawk.

If a man wants to get at his actual dimensions let him visit a graveyard.

I often set down square on the ice by having my feet got out of place, but never could see anything to laugh at, (especially if there was some water on the top of the ice,) but I notice other people can.

Precepts are like cold buckwheat slapjacks, nobody feels like being sassy to them, and nobody wants to adopt them.

If any body wants to be an old bachelor, and get sick at a boarding tavern, and have a back room in the fourth story, and have a red-hair chambermaid bring his water-gruel to him in a tin wash-basin, I have always said, and I stick to it yet, he has got a right to do it.
It is dreadful easy work to repent of other folks' sins—but not very profitable.

Indian Troubles—More War.

The New York Herald speaks of the Indian troubles in the west, of the present Indian policy and of that likely to be adopted, in this wise:

"The western frontiers of Kansas and the Indian Territory and the whole northwest of Texas appear to be again threatened by the savages. They received a short time ago their payment for keeping the peace for a time, and are now again lacking in arms, ammunition and blankets. In consequence they are disposed to go into the wholesale murder business once more and show our authorities the necessity of buying them off through unprincipled Indian agencies. It is proposed to try the Penn Quaker dodge on them the next time. It will be found that the Indian of to-day and the one of the time of Penn is quite a different man. The latter could sell a tract of land the size of Pennsylvania and not miss it. Game was plenty everywhere, "fire water" scarce, and nobody felt disposed to philanthropically scrape the dirt and vermin off the savage to study his color or his capacity for civilization.

Now, however, the former lands of the Indians are cut by railroads the game is scarce, the hunting of grounds barren, "fire water" abundant and plenty of ruffians to sell it, and everybody disposed to scrape the Indians down to the bone to see what kind of material he is made of and how he shall be classified in the scale of humanity.

The Indian of to-day is a lazy, brutal cut-throat. To deal with him upon any other supposition is to make him worse. The method of governmental management in our Indian affairs is an evil as bad as any that exists in the country. There are some commissioners enjoying salaries for superintending tribes of Indians that long ago ceased to exist. There is but one method of managing this question successfully, and that is to make each Territorial government responsible for the good behavior of the tribes within its border. The frontier men will keep the savages quiet, only give them an opportunity
